The Mother's Soldier Boy

Bright verse from Copeton

The following verses, written by Alfred Pike of Copeton appeared in a recent issue of 'The Soldier', a paper published in Sydney in the interests of Australian soldiers the verses were described by the editor as "sweetly, smoothly and sympathetically" written, with which statement we are in accord. Mr Pike's lines run

The sunbeams lingered on the crest
Of mountain peaks that spanned this west,
And rays of gold and crimson gleamed
Like searchlights from afar they streamed.

The creek flows on its winding way
Where roving sheep and cattle stray,
Amid the corn fields waving green
The settler's rural home is seen.

Where fruit trees shed a cooling shade
The garden plots were neatly made
And honeysuckle's scented blooms
With fragrance filled the panelled rooms.

The settlers wife with loving care
Had reared her grown-up children here;
Her sturdy sons with bushland pride
Could plough & shear and dauntless ride.

The youngest son was mother's joy -
She called him "Mother's Baby Boy";
He smiled—for he was six feet high -
Then kissed her cheek and made reply.

"A baby once but now a man,
Between the two how small the span;
A few short years it seems to be
Since I was rocked on mother's knee."

By rocky mount and shady glen
The call "To Arms!" rang out again,
And wiry bushmen—browned and tall—
In haste responded to the call.

From the blue gum creeks and plains
spread wide,
From rocky spurs where stockmen ride,
From mining camps with virgin gold,
They joined the ranks and were enrolled.
From grazing runs and farms they came,
To fight for England's honoured name,
Enlisting at the Empire's bid,
As known of old their fathers did.

And Willie—Mother's boy—was brave
To help the Flag of Freedom wave,
And so he cast aside the shears
And joined the Empire's volunteers.

But soon there came the parting dread
With sad farewells the tears were shed,
The farmer's home was dull that day
When Willie, mounted, rode away.

One day a letter came from Will,
The mother sat and read until
Each welcome page was dim'd with tears
That came with mingled hopes and fears.

Her soldier boy of travels wrote,
And pictured scenes in lands remote,
From Egypt's sandy land afar
His love shone like the morning star.

"Goodbye dear Mother, do not fret,
Old England's flag is waving yet;
Our Empire calls, to fight we go,
Resolved to die or crush the foe."

A soft smile lit that mother's face,
She rose from off her resting place,
The letter in her bosom lay,
And then we heard her softly say".
"God shield my soldier boy I pray,
And send him back with Peace some day"
She said as quiv'ring lips grew white;
"God guard them at the front to-night."

President's Annual Report

by Trish Hill

This month is our AGM and the start of another financial year. I would like to thank all of our volunteers for their help and support and the work they do to make us successful. The school volunteers, the 'boys' who look after maintenance, the weekend roster volunteers, our committee and our new volunteers, you are our best assets and all contribute to the team, thank you.

The Burratorang Reunion earlier this month was well attended with some new faces. The Truckies Reunion next weekend, May 2nd has generated a lot of interest gearing up to be a successful day. Preston McIntosh and Sheila Strahan who entertained us with Music & Memories on 2014 seniors day, have music sessions in the Drill Hall each Saturday attracting a following and entertaining the visitors.

The steering committee for the WWI /Her War displays have been busy consolidating ideas and objects to start on the cabinets to be completed for the opening on 8th November. Eddie Donohoe, the donor of our Burratorang display photograph, passed away last week. A larger than life character, he will be greatly missed and our thoughts are with his family. ■

Exhibitions Development Annual Report for 2014 / 15

by Doreen Lyon

Looking over the past year, I don't seem to have done very much to report on!! However behind the scenes a lot has been happening. Betty Villy's book on the women of Wollondilly in the First World War which will lead into the new exhibition, Her War, has been steadily underway. New stories come to light all the time and loose ends, such as photos and verifications of dates etc have to be followed up. At the same time Ray Gill has been following the stories of the servicemen from Burratorang Valley and local districts. I have been linking the stories to objects in our collection in order to create an exhibition in the Faces & Places building and the fabulous new cabinet in the Drill Hall. A museum is all about its collection after all, and that is why we requested and received funding from Arts NSW and the Department of Veterans Affairs. The RAHS have also provided funding for Betty's book so we are indeed fortunate, but need to be responsible with what we do with it!

A survey of the objects in our collection currently reveal we are strong in memorials and certificates and photographs and beautiful cards and badges, but we do not have appropriate memorabilia of uniform or printed matter and War Chest items. (I did consider putting both exhibitions in the Drill Hall but there would not be room for all the large framed certificates and memorials and the story boards and photos plus the items already earmarked for HER WAR). So I am particularly grateful to the offer of some of our members for the loan and donation of several items with which we can now create good content in the displays.

You will now start to see changes to the present displays; the first change will be to the Lavercombe cases which will be adapted to include the Littlewood collection, thus re-locating the latter from the Threads exhibition. THREADS will then be gradually taken down and replaced with HER WAR.

I would like to emphasise to all readers that now is the time to include any examples of WW1 which you would like to share, eg nurses', Red Cross or War Chest memories and/or memorabilia-knitted items, shirts for soldiers etc, sheepskin jackets. Does anyone have a military overcoat and knows who wore it?

Examples of the effects on families of when the men returned home. Can you remember your grandmother and grandfather's stories? Was he badly wounded? How did his family cope? We have a story from one family of an eldest daughter who had to devote her life from teenage years to caring for her young brothers and sisters and father because of the deaths of her eldest brother and mother due to the war and the flu which followed the soldiers' return. These are some of the effects of war which are not often told.

What was happening while the men were away? Did their wives have to cope with bushfires, floods and lack of men to help on their farms, like a local Thirlmere family did? How did they cope in Burratorang? Does anyone have a Welcome Home banner made by their family?

HORSES: Since many men took their horses with them, are there any photos and stories of these horses? I can remember all the horses we had on my father's farm and my grandfather's so I am sure someone would remember some of the horses which left our district to be sacrificed on the fields of battle.

Some of the items in the display have been loaned by local people who were not living here at the time of the first World War – but they are still relevant and have significance to their families here today.

We have planning meetings on the morning before the Business Meetings – usually the third Friday—and we welcome ideas. We are working on the program for the opening ceremony and day on November 8th at the moment and so far have agreed on the format of three musical pieces from Picton harmony, four poems to be read and chosen by Jan Moppett, Aileen Davis, plus 2 to be decided; plus four reading from local war postcards, letters and war diaries from 4 school captains from Cawdor, Mount Hunter, Oakdale and The Oaks. Any ideas welcome! ■

Family History & Local Archive Research Annual Report

by Sue Davis Family Historian/Archivist

FAMILY HISTORY AND RESEARCH 2014-2015:

We continue to take many of our research enquiries through emails and some also come through our new website. This means people from afar can ask questions and sometimes gain immediate answers. Some then make a decision to organise a special visit to the centre on a weekend or as part of a holiday excursion. Enquiries have been steady each month with some people researching in person and coming back several times. Some researchers have become members so they have access to our newsletter and can see if any activities our society organises may be of use to their family history research. The new Family History Research form and General Research Enquiry form enable us to more easily help those researchers who have an ongoing need for assistance in finding their information.

From May, 2014 to April 2015 we have supported 37 formal research enquiries.

Thank you to volunteers who have assisted over the last year, including Vivian Allen (our very experienced family historian and photographs compiler); Tina Crocker who has helped during our duty days together; and our President Trish who is a very versatile volunteer.

LOCAL HISTORY COLLECTION: The Wollondilly Local History Archives continue to be used regularly and have proved vital resources in such areas as research when organising displays, high school and university students completing assignments. The cataloguing has been slow this year as more support is needed in cutting, pasting and filing of materials. Thank you to Pam and Colleen who have been helping from time to time.

TRAINING, DEVELOPMENT AND SHARING THE GOOD NEWS:

In May, 2014, it was my absolute pleasure to be able to represent our society at the Australian Museums & Galleries Conference held in Launceston, Tasmania. It was a huge learning experience that helps support my roles at our museum. August is Family History Month and I was pleased to be able to present a talk on "Solving the Mystery of Family History" at our General Meeting. On 28th August, Doreen and I presented a workshop on "A Journey With Apron Strings!" at the Better Practice Conference (Aged Care Workers). In November, Betty and Trish, attended the Royal Australian Historical Society Conference held at Berrima. They came back with some fresh new ideas to share. During October and November I completed a Volunteer placement at The State Records, Kingswood. This was a wonderful opportunity to experience many roles that we perform at our museum but on a much larger scale. Some of these experiences have been taken on board and will be addressed through our Strategic Plan. On the 28th February I attended a RAHS Regional seminar at Young. The main theme was looking at the history of Land Title in New South Wales and gave extra support to the Family History and Local Archive area at our museum. On the 28th March I spoke at the Campbelltown Airs Historical Society Meeting to introduce them to what our Heritage Centre and Museum is all about.

Thank you to all volunteers who have helped throughout the year in Family history and Local Archives. Your efforts are much appreciated. ■

Acquisition Corner

by Allen Seymour

On our Back to Burragorang Day we received a donation of a number of items from Jack Butler. The Butler family operated the coach service to Burragorang Valley for many years. The items are two postcards from Cess Butler to his mother in 1917, and a portrait of Cec on a camel in front of the Sphinx in Egypt. Cess and his brother Arthur both enlisted in the army in World War One, but while they were on the boat going overseas, their father died. Arthur was allowed to leave the army to return home and run the coaching business. Only problem was he had to pay his own way back to Australia!!! Cess went on to serve on the western front. The postcard shown has a butterfly made of silk, and it's wings are the flags of the different nations making up the allies. A beautiful piece of work, and one which I'm sure will be part of our World War One display. (See front page). Our thanks to the Butler family for their donation. ■

Curator's Annual Report for 2014/2015

by Jim Whyte

A busy year again, our achievements have included a number of new acquisitions, improvements to storage and filing. With the new plan cabinet and filing cabinets received from UWS thanks to Neville Catt, we have moved the area plans from the hanging files to the plan cabinet. As these were archival location numbers we then added Mosaic numbers, cross referenced with photos, relevant location and significant information. So far we have entered about 150 plans covering Wollondilly areas from 1890 onwards, Camden, Picton, Nattai, Cawdor, Gundungura Map of Yeranderrie area in 1973, lots for sale at The Oaks in 1908, others with subdivisions, military and early real estate for sale plans. Having Allen on board with his local knowledge of the area and mapping has helped to increase the content entered to Mosaic. Some new acquisitions include Lavercombe family photos in their original pouches (most unusual), Miner's Minute Books from 'Federation Oakdale Colliery' 1954 – 1998 & a 1940 Red Cross poster from Camden Red Cross. Next challenge will be recording old newspapers into Mosaic. They will remain in the archive room. All these movements are for easier researching. Large photos in Store 1 may be relocated as well if we find time and space. As the Yerranderie Scrolls take up all of one of the two plan cabinets in Store 1 and are seldom accessed (they are digitalised for researchers in the Archive Room computers), we may relocate to other storage boxes in Store 1, this will free up the other Plan Cabinet. With the WW1 display about to start, a number of loan items are starting to come in, which will include memorabilia which has to be recorded, photographed and numbered. A new temporary loan sheet has been designed to be certain each object can be traced and returned to the correct lender. Allen, Jim Maureen, Trish.

I would like to acknowledge the work done by the "Boys Outside Team" at the centre, not only with those who delivered the plan and filing cabinets, set them up, repaired them where needed but also the team that built the new Drill Hall cabinet, rehung the exit door, painted and maintained the property—Kevin Wintle, Peter Lyons, John Hickey, John Mainwaring, John Hanger, Ben Lyon and Ray Gill. We have the use of Kevin's trucks at no cost which is great, not forgetting Keith Polson from CPE delivering free loads of mulch for our gardens which has been spread around the outside machinery area and to the gardens. All working together without complaining.

The future of the centre is looking good as a new, younger team is taking on responsibilities which will upgrade and modernise if given a chance, the old team can step back more in an advisory capacity if required, but allowing new ideas to develop. ■

Marketing Officers Annual Report

Bus Tours Annual Report 2014-2015

Over the past twelve months the number of bus tours visiting the Wollondilly Heritage Centre & Museum equaled 58 which was an average of approximately five per month. In total 1,528 people visited the centre on a bus tour giving an average of approximately 140 visitors per month. Over 1,500 scones were ordered from Glenn's Bakery in The Oaks and numerous jars of strawberry jam and bottles of cream were purchased as well as over 3,000 slices being made by our volunteers.

I wish to thank our Booking Officer, Maureen Whyte for her sterling efforts in taking all the bookings and enquiries and Jim Whyte for emailing the bookings to me.

I also wish to thank our volunteers, too numerous to name individually for fear of missing someone, for their efforts on the bus tours whether they are serving morning tea, cleaning the kitchen, serving in the shop, giving talks or informing our visitors about the many exhibitions and displays.

Annual Marking Report May 2014—April 2015

Marketing the Wollondilly Heritage Centre & Museum is a never ending task and by far word of mouth is one of the best marketing tools available as well as our website. Making use of social media such as Facebook, Twitter and Instagram are part of the present technology available to market the Centre. With this in mind it is hoped that we can attract more visitors by the use of this technology.

Thanks to Doreen Lyon we are once again registered with Destination NSW so this will put the Centre out in the public domain. Recent contact with Blair Briggs of Mowbray Park Farm Stay and Barry McConville of Pepper Tree Ridge B&B has informed us that the Wollondilly Tourism Association Inc. (WTAI) is about to embark on an exciting future to promote tourism in the shire is hopeful news.

Over the past year our volunteers have represented the Wollondilly Heritage Centre at such events as NAIDOC Day, Australia Day, Thirlmere Steam Festival and just recently at the IlluminARTE Festival in Picton and Wollondilly Remembers in Thirlmere. These events are a great way of marketing our centre. I wish to thank all our volunteers who helped to set up the stalls, sell publications and promote the museum. Your help has been invaluable.

I would also like to thank the Wollondilly Shire Council for their assistance at many of these events. I am looking forward to 2015-16 with great excitement as Wollondilly Shire becomes the tourism capital of Greater Sydney. ■

Marketing Officers Report for April

by Louisa Singleman

Bookings for bus tours have been very low this month (April) which can be attributed to Easter and the school holidays but I am sure that the group who came along had a pleasant and informative time.

It was also pleasing to have among our visitors a local scout group and leader visit the centre. I am sure they were pleasantly surprised to see all the exhibitions and information which would be able to assist them with their project. Thank you to Colleen and June for assisting the scouts and hopefully they will pass on to others the value of the centre in accomplishing their badges.

April Marketing Report

As mentioned in the Annual Marketing Report our volunteers were out and about representing the Wollondilly Heritage Centre at two local events in the Wollondilly. Firstly, the IlluminARTE Festival which was organised by the Wollondilly Shire Council. This event was a great success due to the wonderful advertising and the hard work of those involved especially Rob Moran, the Council Community Events Co-ordinator. Thanks to Betty Villy, Jenny and Larry Wood, Doreen and Ben Lyon and my grand daughter, Gabi Rodrigues who helped to set up and man the stall. Your help is greatly appreciated.

Another successful event was Wollondilly Remembers 100 Years ANZAC Landing at Gallipoli organised by the Picton, Thirlmere, Bargo RSL Sub-Branch. Thanks also to Doreen & Ben Lyon and Robyn & Ray Gill who put together a very informative photographic exhibition and display. No doubt we can look forward to some great photographs taken by Robyn on the day. The event was very well attended and the remembrance service was quite moving. Noted dignitaries included Angus Taylor MHR, Jai Rowell MLA, Councilor Col Mitchell, Mayor of Wollondilly and several RSL representatives. CHECK ABOVE with Jai Rowells office ????

National Trust Festival Saturday, 16th & Sunday 17th May

The National Trust Festival is held throughout April and May each year. This year's theme is Conflict & Compassion. We have decided to revisit our With the Best of Intentions exhibition which tells the stories of British children who came to Australia under the care of Dr Barnardo's Homes. Many of the children were sent to Mowbray Park Farm School. Visitors may also watch the DVD of the same name of some of the stories told by the ex-pupils of Mowbray Park Farm School. A tour of Mowbray Park Farm Stay is also available by contacting them directly on 4680 9243.

Truckies Reunion Saturday, 2nd May 11am onwards

This event is being organised by volunteer Ian Welsh. This should be a great day for reminiscing and catching up with old friends. Bookings are required. Contact Ian Welsh on 4681 8079 for further information or to register. ■

Annual Library Report

by Pacita Alexander

A welcome addition to the library is Betty Villy's fascinating account of 'Medical Care in the Cowpastures' in the nineteenth century in her book The Racing Doctor. Her research has uncovered stories of the people who administered cures for ailments and diseases, like William Kenny, possibly an unqualified doctor, but an expert on the race track, and Granny Long, an aboriginal healer and mid-wife in the Burratorang Valley. Betty's accounts of the dangerous patent medicines of the time, and deadly diseases like tuberculosis and smallpox make you realise the courage and endurance of our ancestors.

A book with an appeal to lovers of Burratorang is Les Seibrigh's Yerranderie 1975. He grew up in Yerranderie, and after thirty years away went back for a nostalgic visit in 1975. Not only did he write a brief history, but included his poems and wonderful photos.

Lorna Sparkowski's book, From Farmers to Firefighters—75 years of Lakesland Brigade is a record of an integral part of living in the Wollondilly region— the constant battle against bushfires, and the courageous people who volunteer their services.

And finally in this year of the commemoration of World War I, we have the Front Line Dispatches by Nic van Oudtshoorn, which covers Australians at war between 1845-1972. The photos and paintings in this book are heart-wrenching. ■

FAMILY HISTORY WRITERS & TALKERS GROUP

Please note the groups next meeting will be held on 20th MAY from 9.30am to 12 noon. At our last meeting Enid Roach spoke about life in Tottenham as a child. What an interesting tale! Doreen Lyon

Ancient Thirlmere, NSW

An extract from an old article by Mr F B Knox—Our thanks to him for his extensive research

The first inhabitants of the area now known as Thirlmere were members of the aboriginal tribe, the Gundungurra Tribe. They claimed as their territory the land drained by the Warragamba River and all its tributaries, a small area in the Bathurst district and most of the country now called Wollondilly Shire, the Nepean River being their boundary on the east. The Dharouk tribe was located on their northern boundary, the Tharawal Tribe lived between the Nepean River and the coast between the Cataract River and Sydney.

On the south-eastern side were situated the Wodi-Wodi Tribe and to the west, on the other side of the Great Dividing Range were the Wiradjuri Tribesmen. All these tribes spoke a slightly different dialect, but they could understand each other sufficiently to enable them to meet at their initiation ceremonies which were held annually as a rule. One meeting place was along the banks of Myrtle Creek, where the Gundungurra, Wodi-Wodi and Tharawal Tribes would meet. Besides the initiation ceremonies, girls from the tribes would be exchanged as inter-marriage (?) among members of the same tribe was not allowed. Some trade in gem stones such as rock crystal from the Wollondilly and Cox Rivers would be exchanged with black basalt from the Kiama District from which to make their axes. The crystals were popular amongst the aborigines all over Australia and were used by medicine men or kooradgies to make 'magic'. Most aboriginal men carried a crystal in a bag slung around their neck, this bag was called a dilly-bag.

The lumps of quartzite or 'lapstones' were found at the head of Myrtle Creek and were hard enough to be used to sharpen the basalt axes on. The Sydney natives had to use axes of quartzite as they traded with the Dharouk Tribe who obtained the stone from Lapstone Hill. The quartzite is formed by the action of volcanic action on sandstone. Traces of fused ironstone are usually present.

The number of aborigines of the Gundungurra Tribe would not be in excess of 200 at any time and their numbers dwindled away till about the year 1900 when there were no pure-blooded natives left. The remnant of the tribe moved to a reserve set up at La Perouse near Sydney where employment was more plentiful than locally.

There is not a record of any of the Gundungurra Tribe shot by the white man, but the natives had no immunity to many of the white man's diseases such as small-pox, measles, mumps, influenza, clods?, scarlet fever and other viruses.

Their Chief or Headman in 1802 when Ensign Barrallier met them was Goondel. He was succeeded by 'Young Bundle' and the last recognised Chief was Murrengurru [Moyengully] who died in 1857. He was buried about two and a half miles from Argyle Street, Picton on what is now Island Park. Numbers of the tribe used Goulburn as their trading outlet and a local Chief called 'King Billy' held sway in that district. 'King Billy' died leaving no sons, but his daughter, named 'Princess Mudra' by the white people, married an American negro named Britt. Their only child was 'Princess Millie' who married first an ex-convict named Tom Simmons and after his death a Mr Marley. She left no children so the 'royal line' became extinct.

Before the white man came to this country, the Chiefs or Headmen were elected and did not descend in the hereditary line, something like the early Saxon people who elected a King or Chief when the position became vacant.

ANZAC DAY AT THIRLMERE RSL—18TH APRIL

After a very wet week the members of Thirlmere RSL had done a good job of draining and drying out the grounds inside of the marquee for all of the exhibitors, for this we thank them. The morning started around 10:30am with a march through Thirlmere. The bands were playing, soldiers were marching, with an array of army trucks and tanks. Also some men dressed in WWI uniforms and a nurse dressed in cape and cap. One of the exhibits was the Roberts family displaying their grandfather's WWI objects. One object that took my eye was the sight of a rifle. It was nice to see the Tharawal Local Aboriginal Land Council marching too.—Ray & Robyn Gill

A coincidence?

A TOHS member sent the photo (below) to us. The officer in the centre of the photo bears an uncanny resemblance to Lieutenant Colonel Astley John Onslow Thompson VD who was featured in our last issue.

It's from one of the 2015 Unibic ANZAC biscuit tins. This one was on sale at The Oaks post office and has a picture of the post office on the beach at Gallipoli. Inside there are two post cards, one is the same picture as on the tin, the other is this one. It's captioned 1st division headquarters staff landing at Gallipoli.

It's great to receive a response to our stories. Thanks
